Wayne State University C² Pipeline Warriors College Experience

The College and Career Ready (C²) Pipeline program incorporates science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM) into a hands-on learning environment that emphasizes health careers and enhances students' secondary educational experience through afterschool and summer programming. Collaborating partners include Wayne State University's College of Nursing, College of Pharmacy and Health Science, School of Medicine, College of Engineering, School of Social Work and the Mike Ilitch School of Business. One of the highlights of the C² Pipeline program is the Warriors College Experience. During this 11 day program, students live on campus and attend classes taught by university faculty and staff. Participants are also placed on an Interprofessional Education (IPE) team. With the guidance of a mentor, each IPE team works to develop a project that addresses diabetes. All teams present their projects at the end of the program with the hopes of earning scholarship money to Wayne State University.

The 2015 Warriors College Experience had a great impact on the students that attended. 31 of the senior participants applied to Wayne State University for their postsecondary education. As of January 1st, 2016, 24 of those students were accepted to the university. Nine of those students have committed to becoming a Warrior in the Fall of 2016.

C² Pipeline is currently seeking individuals to serve as IPE team mentors during our 2016 Warriors College Experience program. Mentors come from all professional backgrounds, have an interest working with college bound youth and have an interest or connection to a health care or STEM field. Additionally, a mentor position can be filled by multiple people from the same organization (3 people from the ER unit at Beaumont Hospital for example).

Expectations of a mentor would include sharing expertise and guiding an IPE team of five students, over the two week period as they work and compete against the other sponsored IPE teams on a project.
